Families are defined here as consumer units of two or more persons. These consumer units are traditionally-defined families or unrelated individuals who make joint expenditure decisions.

- Food was the third largest component in total spending. About 14 cents of every expenditure dollar was allocated to food.

- In 2004, the largest over-the-year increase among the major components of spending occurred in personal insurance and pensions.