

Vehicles, ground surfaces, and worker motion or position had the highest median number of days away from work, with 10 days each.

The medians for vehicles and worker motion or position each fell from the previous year. In 2003, the median for vehicles was 11 days, while the median for worker motion was 12 days. The median for floors, walkways, and ground surfaces remained unchanged.

Injuries resulting from worker motion or position, floors, walkways, ground surfaces, and vehicles had the highest median number of days away from work: 10.

Median days away from work due to nonfatal occupational injuries or illnesses, by source, 2004

Source: U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, November 2005

