OCCUPATIONAL EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES FOR SELECTED STEM OCCUPATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS' METROPOLITAN AREAS AND DIVISIONS – MAY 2015

Among selected metropolitan areas in Massachusetts, Boston-Cambridge-Nashua New England City and Town Area (the Boston NECTA) and Leominster-Gardner had wages that were significantly above the national average for computer user support specialists, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today. Regional Commissioner Deborah A. Brown noted that the Boston NECTA also had wages that were significantly higher than the respective national averages for applications software developers and systems software developers. Nationwide, the average (mean) wage for computer user support specialists was $52,430; for applications software developers, $102,160; and for systems software developers, $108,760. (See table A. This release contains data on selected science, technology, engineering, and mathematics – STEM – occupations. A list of occupations included in the STEM definition used for this release is available at www.bls.gov/oes/stem_list.xlsx. For definitions of the Massachusetts metropolitan areas discussed in this release, please see Technical Note.)

Note: See footnotes at end of table.

Note: An asterisk indicates that the mean annual wage for this area is significantly different from the national average of all areas at the 90-percent confidence level.

The Providence-Warwick, R.I.-Mass. NECTA and the Nashua, N.H.-Mass. NECTA Division were excluded because they are primarily located outside of Massachusetts. The New Bedford, Mass. NECTA and Lynn-Saugus-Marblehead, Mass. NECTA Division were excluded because of insufficient data.

The Boston NECTA had a combined employment of 69,990 for the three selected STEM occupations, with 49,230 of these jobs in the Boston-Cambridge-Newton NECTA division, while the Framingham NECTA division and the Lowell-Billerica-Chelmsford NECTA division had a combined employment of 9,830 and 4,970 respectively. Among the other selected metropolitan areas in Massachusetts, Worcester and Springfield had a combined employment of 2,630 and 2,450, respectively, for the three occupations. (See table B.)

Location quotients (LQ's) allow us to explore the occupational make-up of a metropolitan area by comparing the composition of jobs in an area relative to the national average. For example, a location quotient of 2.0 indicates that an occupation accounts for twice the share of employment in the area than it does nationally.

Several of the selected metropolitan areas in Massachusetts had some of the highest LQ's in the nation for the three selected STEM occupations. The Framingham and Lowell NECTA divisions had LQs of 4.71 and 2.38, respectively, for applications software developers. High LQs were noted for systems software developers in the Framingham (7.84), Lowell (5.33), and Boston (3.60) NECTA divisions. Pittsfield also had an above average LQ (2.93) for systems software developers. (See table B.)

Wages for computer user support specialists in selected Massachusetts metropolitan areas

The Boston NECTA was a metropolitan area in Massachusetts with significantly higher wages than the U.S. average of $52,430 for computer user support specialists. Seven of the eight divisions in the Boston NECTA had above-average wages for this occupation, with Peabody the exception. Leominster ($58,940) also had above-average wages for computer user support specialists. Pittsfield ($40,790) had wages that were significantly lower than the U.S. average for this occupation.

Wages for applications software developers in selected Massachusetts metropolitan areas

Wages for applications software developers in the Boston NECTA ($109, 540) were significantly higher than the national average of $102,160. The Lawrence NECTA division ($112,050), part of the Boston NECTA, also had above-average wages. Springfield ($94,610) had wages that were significantly below the national average for this occupation. In addition, three divisions in the Boston NECTA had significantly lower wages: Brockton-Bridgewater-Easton, Haverhill-Newburyport-Amesbury Town, and Peabody-Salem-Beverly.

Wages for systems software developers in selected Massachusetts metropolitan areas

The Boston NECTA ($115,180) was the only metropolitan area where wages for systems software developers were significantly above the national average of $108,760. Two divisions in the Boston NECTA also had above-average wages: Lowell ($126,020) and Boston ($114,780). Worcester ($94,600), Barnstable ($93, 680), Pittsfield ($90,600), and Springfield ($89,840) had wages that were significantly lower than the national average for this occupation.

These statistics are from the Occupational Employment Statistics (OES) survey, a federal-state cooperative program between BLS and State Workforce Agencies, in this case, the Massachusetts Department of Unemployment Assistance, the Connecticut Department of Labor, and the New Hampshire Department of Employment Security.

Statistical Significance

A value that is statistically different from another does not necessarily mean that the difference has economic or practical significance. Statistical significance is concerned with the ability to make confident statements about a universe based on a sample. It is entirely possible that a large difference between two values is not significantly different statistically, while a small difference is, since both the size and heterogeneity of the sample affect the relative error of the data being tested.

Technical Note

The Occupational Employment Statistics (OES) survey is a semiannual survey measuring occupational employment and wage rates for wage and salary workers in nonfarm establishments in the United States. The OES program produces employment and wage estimates for over 800 occupations for all industries combined in the nation; the 50 states and the District of Columbia; 432 metropolitan areas and divisions; 167 nonmetropolitan areas; and Guam, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. National estimates are also available by industry for NAICS sectors, 3-, 4-, and selected 5- and 6-digit industries, and by ownership across all industries and for schools and hospitals. OES data are available at www.bls.gov/oes/tables.htm.

OES estimates are constructed from a sample of about 1.2 million establishments. Survey questionnaires or instructions for reporting data electronically are mailed to approximately 200,000 sampled establishments in May and November each year. May 2015 estimates are based on responses from six semiannual panels collected over a 3-year period: May 2015, November 2014, May 2014, November 2013, May 2013, and November 2012. The overall national response rate for the six panels is 73.5 percent based on establishments and 69.6 percent based on weighted sampled employment. (Response rates are slightly lower for these estimates due to the federal shutdown in October 2013.) The unweighted employment of sampled establishments across all six semiannual panels represents approximately 57.9 percent of total national employment. For more information about OES concepts and methodology, go to www.bls.gov/oes/current/oes_tec.htm.

The May 2015 OES estimates are based on the 2010 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) system and the 2012 North American Industry Classification System (NAICS). Information about the 2010 SOC is available on the BLS website at www.bls.gov/soc and information about the 2012 NAICS is available at www.bls.gov/bls/naics.htm.
